Supporting Information

Wound Healing Potential of the Standardized Extract of Boswellia serrata on Experimental Diabetic Foot Ulcer via Inhibition of Inflammatory, Angiogenetic and Apoptotic Markers

Zhang Pengzong¹*, Li Yuanmin²*, Xiong Xiaoming³, Deng Shang³, Xiong Wei⁴, Lang Zhigang³, Du Dongzhou¹, Yu Wenjing⁴, Yue Jianbiao⁴, Xiang Yang¹, Li Xia⁴

*These two authors contributed equally to this article.

Affiliations

¹Medical Quality Control Office, Sichuan Provincial Orthopedic Hospital, Chengdu, P. R. China
²Key Laboratory of Transplant Engineering and Immunology, NHFPC, Regenerative Medicine Research Center, West China Hospital, Sichuan University, Chengdu, P. R. China
³Department of Surgery, Sichuan Provincial Orthopedic Hospital, Chengdu, P. R. China
⁴Department of Internal Medicine, Sichuan Provincial Orthopedic Hospital, Chengdu, P. R. China
Correspondence

Dr. Li Xia
Department of Internal Medicine
Sichuan Provincial Orthopedic Hospital
Chengdu 610041
P. R. China
Phone: + 86 180 8090 7500
lixialixiamail@sina.com

Fig. 1S $^{13}$C-NMR (A) and ESI-MS (B) of 12-Oleanene-3, 24-diol; 3α-form, 24-Carboxylic acid (i.e., α-boswellic acid) along with its chemical representation.