Supplementary material

Constituents of Passiflora incarnata, but Not of Valeriana officinalis, Interact with the Organic Anion Transporting Polypeptides (OATP)2B1 and OATP1A2

Anima M. Schäfer¹, Pierrine M. Gilgen¹, Clara Spirgi¹, Olivier Potterat², Henriette E. Meyer zu Schwabedissen¹

Affiliations

¹Biopharmacy, Department Pharmaceutical Sciences, University of Basel, Switzerland
²Pharmaceutical Biology, Department Pharmaceutical Sciences, University of Basel, Switzerland

Correspondence

Prof. Dr. med. Henriette E. Meyer zu Schwabedissen
Biopharmacy
Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences
University of Basel
Klingelbergstrasse 50
4056 Basel
Switzerland
Phone: +41 (0)61-20 71495
Fax: +41 (0)61 20 71498
h.meyerzuschwabedissen@unibas.ch
Fig. 1S HPLC-UV-MS analysis of Arkocaps capsule extract. Numbers refer to isoorientin (1), orientin (2), vitexin (3), and isovitexin (4).
Fig. 2S HPLC-UV-MS analysis of Valverde tablets. Numbers refer to isoorientin (1), orientin (2), vitexin (3), and isovitexin (4).
Fig. 3S HPLC-UV-MS analysis of the references orientin (2), vitexin (3), and apigenin (5).
Fig. 4S HPLC-UV-MS analysis of the reference isoorientin (1).
Fig. 5S HPLC-UV-MS analysis of the reference isovitexin (4).