This detailed image shows a colonic tubular adenoma with low grade dysplasia. In the normal course of events it would simply be characterized as a polyp, Kudo III, Paris Is, and Hiroshima B-type. However the original image resembled a 17th-century oil painting, prompting the idea to also photo-edit it in a baroque style. Thus we see here a tubular adenoma as Rembrandt van Rijn might have painted it!

Tanya Bisseling, Nijmegen, The Netherlands

“Art in Endoscopy” is an initiative of four gastroenterologists in training that aims to display examples of the incidentally beautiful images that are sometimes encountered in regular endoscopic practice.

Bibliography
DOI: https://doi.org/10.1055/a-1121-0209
Endoscopy 2020; 52: 423
© Georg Thieme Verlag KG
Stuttgart · New York
ISSN 0013-726X

►Fig. 1 Oil-painting of adenoma.